WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS W Va
June 28 1880

To J. Montgomery Bond, Esq—MY DEAR SIR I have your letter of the 16th inst and in reply to it I would say that I agree fully as to the nature of the coming political contest and as far as my health will permit I will do all I can to keep in power the republican party but as in taking the chairmanship of the national committee that I cannot do for the reason that I am physically unable to undergo the labors which necessarily belong to the position I found myself after the adjournment of congress very much broken down and I was therefore compelled to abandon all my business affairs although they had been neglected during the entire session of congress and came here with the hope of having my health restored I am obliged under the advice of my physician to remain here for several weeks Therefore you see it is impossible for me to do as you as well as many other friends think I could during the coming canvass You may be sure however that as soon as I am well enough I shall give my entire energy as a member of the committee to the great work which is before us Yours truly

ENGLAND'S FOOD SOURCES.

Dr. Lyon Playfair and Mr. Caird, both eminent statisticians of England, have recently written to the London Times upon the future of wheat production in that country. The substance of the two articles, which were written almost simultaneously, and the comments of the Times upon them are condensed by the Chicago Tribune, which draws the conclusion from them, that so far as growing wheat to be sold at a profit that business is virtually at an end in England.

The fact, says the Tribune, of a succession of bad crops in Great Britain is not considered as the sole cause of the sale of American wheat in England; that was an incident of the great change in trade that was to take place. The short crops of England hastened, of course, the shipment of American breadstuffs, but it has also familiarized the British consumers with cheap bread,—with bread cheaper than it can be produced and sold for by British farmers. The promise of better times to English farmers, with a return of better seasons and fair crops, is not accepted by these writers as affording much comfort to English wheat growers. The fact will remain unchanged that American wheat and American flour will continue to be sold in unlimited quantities in England for less than they can be profitably produced there, and consequently renders wheat culture, as a matter of profit, wholly out of the question. The road from the American wheatfields to the British market once being traveled, that it will be traveled continuously is beyond all question, no matter what the weather or the crops in England may happen to be. The inability of England to produce food sufficient for home consumption is not an accident; it has existed for a long time. The cheaper the food can be furnished the greater will be the demand and the consumption; so, without reference to the home supply, there will be a demand for American breadstuffs, and the price of English wheat must be governed by that of the supply from America, thus rendering the growth of English wheat unprofitable even with a fair crop. Not one-third of the arable land adapted to cultivation in the United States is yet under the plow; even that devoted to wheat is permitted to produce its mere thirteen bushels to the acre, when, so soon as the occasion may require it, the yield per acre can be increased largely. Nor can the British farmer hope that the United States will in time so increase their population as to need the whole wheat production. Dr. Playfair states that when the Americans shall number a hundred millions, even that population will make no serious impression on the stores possible to be produced from the soil of America. Outside, and in addition to the United States, is the dominion of Canada, with its almost unexplored wheat fields in the valley of Lake Winnipeg, and so any hope of the British wheat farmer of any failure of the American competition is entirely too remote. Small consolation for the British farmer is afforded by the prospect in which "wherever the eye looks to the west and northwest of the American continent it beholds a field of golden wheat ripening for the food of hungry Englishmen."

The permanency of America as the country for producing food for the British Islands and for other states in Europe is added by the constantly recurring progress in other matters. The wheat fields of Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa, Dakota, and of the valley of the Red river, are within a few hours' travel of the Atlantic ports. The cost of transportation no longer prohibits the removal of grain across one-half the continent. Wheat put on cars at the Missouri river, in Dakota, is included within a few hours among the receipts at Chicago, and sold hence under a transportation contract for delivery at any port in Europe. The cost of ocean transportation has diminished under the great demand for it, and under the improved means for handling grain as well as other descriptions of merchandise. Vessels have reformed their construction and and been adapted for the carriage of all manner of freight. Live beeves, sheep and hogs are now transported as safely, expeditiously and comfortably from the plains of Kansas to Europe as human passengers were thirty years ago. With the demand for speedy, safe and appropriate ocean transportation, self-interest has been prompt in furnishing these. Fresh beef is shipped now by the carcass from one to the other continent as readily as it was thirty years ago from one city in this country to another.

The economy of steam navigation has also advanced greatly of late years. The improvement in boilers and engines and all machinery, used in steam navigation has been very great, especially in the way of economy. Forty tons of coal per day now accomplishes the same work on an ocean steamer that some years ago required 100 tons. Machinery has now been invented whereby it is expected that even greater reductions in the amount of fuel can be made. An ordinary fast passenger steamer burns 500 tons of coal on a voyage, and the freight steamer 300 tons. If this consumption can be reduced one half, as it is expected will be done, the saving in room, in the cost of fuel, and in that of labor, will permit a liberal reduction in the cost of ocean transportation.

Wheat, however, is not the only food product with which the United States must hereafter supply Great Britain and other states of Europe. Our corn has not until within a few years been appreciated as is now done in Europe. English and Irish breeders of cattle have learned that it is the cheaper mode to keep their cattle on the pasture and then fatten them on American corn. That is the only hope these men have of competing with American beaves sent from this country. So with the hog market. Of course the supply of packed beef, and pork, lard and cut meats must go from this country, because upon the supply of cheap meat from America millions of people in Europe must depend for having any meat at all.

American butter and American cheese have already taken possession of the British market, and as the time progresses the supply of other provisions from America must go on to meet a demand forever increasing, and which cannot be answered from any other quarter of the globe. To this must be soon added, besides the supply of every description of canned vegetables, a regular trade in apples, pears, peaches, and the smaller fruits. The means for transporting these cheaply and without injury will doubtless be found, and that very soon.

In short, Great Britain abandons the attempt to compete with the United States in the matter of supplying the British people with breadstuffs. It is conceded that they can buy both bread and meat from America cheaper than these articles can be produced at home. This state of things is portentous of a social revolution in the British islands. The value of land and the rent of land, no longer able to produce the food necessary to support those who live upon it, must undergo a shrinkage which threatens the landed aristocracy of England with a loss of revenue of the most alarming magnitude. Tenants cannot and will no longer undertake to pay rent which consumes the value of all they can produce. The land can no longer be used with profit to raise breadstuffs or cattle. The rent must be so reduced that the immense revenue derived from it must be diminished proportionately. The rental of the land falling, it must pass from the hands of landlords to tenant proprietors, and the incoming generation of farming proprietors must largely take the place as the ruling population now occupied by the aristocracy, whose wealth consists in the income from rented lands.

THE HOOSIER STATE.

The "true inwardness" of the decision of the supreme court of Indiana made two weeks ago, declaring the invalidity of certain constitutional amendments recently adopted in that state, has come to light, and it turns out to be thus: The supreme court is democratic, and the decision is made in the interests of that party. One of the amendments abolished the October election and postponed the vote for the state ticket and congressmen to the same day in November on which the presidential election occurs. This left Ohio as the only state holding a preliminary election in October, and Garfield's nomination assured that election to the republicans. The democrats have ever since felt the necessity for a possible offset to the Ohio election, and hence this decision. The constitutional amendment which has been set aside received an undisputed majority of all the votes cast upon that question. But there were township elections on the same day at which a larger vote was cast than the aggregate vote on the amendments. This has furnished a partisan bench with no excuse for nullifying the will of the people and playing into the hands of their party. The amendments did not receive a majority of the votes cast at the township elections, which had nothing in common with the vote on the amendments, and this flimsy pretext is used to restore the October election and escape the impediments thrown in the way of colonization and repeating by one of those amendments. But this partisan decision may react, and the result be very different from what was intended to be effected by it.

When the democrats elected Williams governor four years ago, all the advantages were on their side. Mr. Orth had been forced to withdraw from the republican ticket, and Gen. Harrison was substituted at the last moment. This change brought out considerable resentment among the Germans, and on the whole weakened the republicans. There was also a strong disaffection among the republicans on account of the resumption policy. The greenback vote in the state amounted to 12,000, and it is entirely within bounds to say that 10,000 of this number came from the republicans. The democrats with a greenback proclivities voted the regular party ticket, for both the democratic platform and the democratic candidate (Blue Jeans Williams) were entirely satisfactory to them. But Williams received only 5000 majority, and would have been defeated by about that number had the republicans with greenback proclivities voted their own party ticket, as did the democrats who were similarly inclined.

From these facts the Chicago Tribune concludes that if Indiana shall go republican in October, as well as Ohio, the democrats of the country will wish that the supreme court had been republican, in which case there would have been no partisan decision affecting amendments that were all in the line of political honesty and had received the approval of a majority of all the citizens who cared to vote thereon. If it shall go democratic, that party will not acquire any great advantage from a success achieved through such questionable methods.

A CARD.

ASTORIA, Oregon, June 26, 1880.

Editor Astorian: HAVING NOTICED IN THE PORTLAND COMmercial Reporter an article referring to purchases of salmon on which I am putting the Crown Brand, I will ask space in your columns (for the information of Mr. Farish and his green-eyed Astoria correspondent) for a copy of my contract with the Astoria Packing Company which I enclose herewith. It is the object of the reporter to give the Crown Brand a black eye by making it carry some of the reputation unfortunately gained by the proprietor of the Astoria Packing Company during his first year's experience, and which, in the experience had befallen any of Mr. Farish's friends, would never have been heard of again as packers, but perhaps might have come out as Commercial Reporters. I would ask for their further information that the demand for the Crown Brand having increased so as to exceed the capacity of the Bay View fishery, I have, rather than my customers should be compelled to use inferior goods, made contracts as per copy which virtually makes me superintendent of factories contracted with for the months of May and June, at which time all packers and fishermen well know the finest and latest salmon are taken, and being packed under my personal supervision, have only accepted such goods as I consider worthy to bear my label. After having seventeen year's experience in the canning business, I will guarantee them to be one of the finest lots of salmon ever leaving the Columbia river.

I am sorry that any of my competitors should become so envious as to make mention of such small matters to try and detract from the good name of the Crown brand. Instead of trying to create prejudice against another they should honestly endeavor to bring their own goods to that degree of favor the Crown brand has so long enjoyed and which has far they have failed to reach. R. D. HUME.

COPY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 14, 1880.

I have this day sold to R. D Hume five thousand (5000) cases four (4) dozen each, Columbia, river salmon, at one dollar and — cents per dozen, f. o. b. Buyer to furnish labels, seller to put them on; cases to be made by seller with such brand as buyer may dictate; buyer furnishing stencils or stamps for the same. Goods to be packed subject to inspection and approval of the buyer or his agent, while in process of canning. Payment to be made in U. S. gold coin on presentation of shipping documents in San Francisco; goods to be of good quality and to be delivered on board ship or steamer at buyer's option, during the months of May and June, 1880, in shipments of 1000 cases each. Drawbacks on tin and lead for account of seller if exported. Usual guarantee against blown or pricked tins. In the event of the Astoria Packing company's cannery being destroyed by fire this contract to be void.

MAYOR'S OFFICE Portland July 1

To the Hon the Common Council GENTLEMEN—I would most respectfully call your attention to the fact that certain parties have entered upon and taken possession of that portion of property belonging to the city of Portland east of blocks 11 and 12 known as the Public Levee These parties claim to be acting for and in behalf of a corporation known as the Oregon Railway Co Limited This company have also filed a complaint in the state circuit court asking that the above property be given to the above named company for the purposes of a depot or said road and for other purposes as set forth in said complaint I have instructed the city attorney to take such steps as may seem necessary to protect the interests of the city in the ownership of said property The property known as the Public Levee is worth far less than $50 and must continue to increase rapidly in value It should be either sold to the highest bidder, or leased for a term of years by the city after a plan for filling what is now covered by the common council in such a manner that the public should have the right to use a part thereof as a public landing and that lessee at a definite percent to the party who would pay the most money for his use and who would build the wharf on the plan adopted by the common council

I would respectfully recommend that the common council direct the city attorney to employ counsel to assist him in defending the rights of the city in the suit now pending with the Oregonian Railway Company Limited and in preventing trespassers of property on the Public Levee

Respectfully submitted

The Columbia, from Wallula to the Cascades, Shows no Change in 24 Hours —The River here Rose 1½ Inches

The cool weather which has also extended to Eastern Oregon, for the past three days has checked the flood. The Columbia all along the line from the Cascades to Wallula is about at a stand The Willamette above Oregon City has fallen nearly two inches in the past twenty four hours The river here in the twenty four hours ending at 10 o'clock this morning has risen 1½ inches Whether the flood has reached its maximum is still a disputed question It is certain that the river here will not rise more than an inch above the present stage unless there shall be a succession of hot days in the immediate future

Business among jobbing and commission houses is terribly demoralized and there is no immediate prospect for a better state of affairs Trade on First street as far down as Washington is reported good by dealers and up town stores have all the customers they can attend to The removal of the landing of the O R & N Company's boats and the railroad ferry to Lambe dock and the more than usual number of passengers to the State Fair gives the dock from 4 to 5 P M the appearance it bore when the Great Republic landed here.

The Flood at The Dalles

The following from The Dalles Times describes the scenes of the flood in that city

Friday the water commenced to rise and kept gradually creeping over the surface of the town On that evening it commenced to crawl over the street between the postoffice and the new Umatilla House Friday night the river rose considerably and Saturday morning found it coming up Court street nearly to First and Second and east through the alley to Moody's store Early on that morning the machinists were awakened from their slumbers and hurried to their shops They removed their lathe and some other machinery to the car shops, some three or four feet higher The machine shop was flooded during the day and the machinists hall to stop work All day Saturday the water increased and at night the company's grounds were overflown entirely except the raised track and the buildings raised to the new level

Sunday the river assumed gigantic proportions and verily the flood was upon us It was a day of intense activity throughout our city The Front street merchants were removing goods to other parts of the city and drays and wagons were constantly employed

The water had filled up Union street nearly to Third up Court it covered the street to near the intersection of Second and on Washington it had come up to the alley between Front and Second The railroad track was covered in a low place near the corner of Front and Court In the afternoon the O R & N Co removed their wharf boat to the east end of Front's dock, and moored her in front of Mr Fitzgerald's store

Sunday night was an anxious night to all on Front street The Columbia had become a torrent and to look across with its mimic white caps, it seemed like a raging inland sea The dull roar and rumble of The Dalles could be heard and sounded like the Niagara To add to the dreariness of this the waves of a swollen, angry river were washing and beating into spray at the door of the occupants of Front street Another hour might see them submerged At 10 o'clock the water covered the entire length of the street from Washington to Union The river was the constant scene of attraction all day Sunday Crowds of people thronged the sidewalks, anxious to get a sight at the swollen stream They crowded the sidewalks where the water had not covered them and stood gazing at the angry flood

On Monday morning the river had submerged the lower part of town to a considerable distance A clear sheet of water extended down Front street from the Columbia hotel The sidewalk of the Cosmopolitan was even with the water's edge, and the proprietor moved his kitchen etc. Six inches of water was on the floor of the Umatilla house, and boats were going through Front street Second street, between Union and Court, was covered with water The sidewalks along Front and the cross streets had been covered with stones which kept them in their places, and those who still remained had raised the contents of their stores up on counters Everybody was anxiously watching the flood not knowing where it would end It had already surpassed the high water mark of 1871, and was fast approaching that of 1876 Looking down Front street at the hour of noon that day, nothing could be seen above the water but the buildings and a portion of the raised railroad bridg of Mill creek The stream is truly at flood tide It presents fully the appearance of a river, and has increased considerably on its banks

The amount of damage done by the flood cannot at present be ascertained The cost of moving heavy stocks of goods will be considerable and the necessary cessation from business will be a great loss It will be some time before our city will again assume its former activity as business has been interfered with by the flood It comes unusually hard so soon after the conflagration of 1879, but we have great faith in the resuscitating power of our city If she could raise, Phœnix like from the conflagration of 1879, she can raise herself from the loss of the flood of 1880

On the 24th of June at noon the river stood 41 feet 1½ inches on that day it rose 7 inches on the 25th 16 inches on the 26th 23 inches on the 27th 12 inches on the 28 h 2½ inches on the 29th 5 inches on the 30th 1 inch At 6 o'clock Wednesday evening the river was 8 feet 9 inches below the high water mark of 1876

MARK LANE REPORT

English Crops and Markets

[SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN.]

LONDON, July 1—The Mark Lane Express review ing the English wheat market for the past week says Despite somewhat too much rain, crops have made satisfactory progress, and anticipations of good crops are becoming more confident. The supplies of home grown wheat, both at Mark Lane and in the country are insignificant Sales were only practicable at a shilling decline Growers yielded with reluctance but abundance and relative cheapness of fine white foreign wheat rendered millers somewhat indifferent to native The weather is now of paramount importance The feeling of depression is due in a great measure to liberal imports into London which were 185 000 qrs during the past fortnight Trade during the week was confined to supply of immediate wants of millers, who were able to satisfy themselves at a decline of fully a shilling per quarter on white and 6d on red deer prices. American shipments all favor buyers Maize was firmly held for last Monday's full rates Trade closed with a decidedly weaker tendency for wheat The arrival at ports of cali have been moderate. The demand for wheat has been inactive. There have been few sales mostly for a continental decline of a shilling per quarter Only three cargoes of maize were received, and owing to its scarcity 26s 3d was paid for mixed American Sales of English wheat last week were 23-205 quarters at 44s 8d per quarter against 38,285 quarters at 42s 6d per quarter for the corresponding period last year The imports into the United Kingdom for the week ending June 19th were 1 063 851 cwt wheat and 755 863 cwt flour

THE CEREAL YEAR.

Review of the California Grain Trade for the Season of 1879-80—Etc.

[SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN.]

SAN FRANCISCO July 1.—The Commercial News, in its summary of the cereal year closed yesterday, says The cereal year which closed yesterday has been on the whole, a very fortunate one, both for producers and merchants of this state. Crops were bountiful prices good and for the first time in a number of years freights were active at fair paying rates sharing with wheat the profits arising from a good market in Europe At the opening of the year it was evident that the crop would be a large one and its quality was supposed to be equal to that of former years. Sales in July were at $1 70@1 77½ for fair to choice but when it became known that both in France and England crops would be short, prices gradually advanced The crop east of the rocky mountains was unprecedented, and heavy exports from Atlantic ports occasionally depressed the English market, which reached here, but actual wants both in king and and on the continent were so large that the depression was only temporary and by October wheat was in active demand at $2 10 and in extremes case $2 15 per cental was reached some holding for still higher prices but later on were glad to realize on it wheat at considerably less than $2 per cental. The ship which had been nominally up since April advanced in sympathy with wheat and in October had reached £3 to a direct port.

The seemingly inexhaustible stocks of wheat in the east gave a set back to the English market during that month and business which had been very active was brought to a standstill, only to be renewed however with increased activity when accompanied with but little interruption to the end of the year The highest rate of freight paid during the crop year was at the beginning of January when the British bark Hawkes 450 tons, was taken at £3 10s for Cork U Kingdom or Havre The lowest rate of the year was paid in April last the Caroline being chartered that month at £1 17s 6d, to Liverpool direct

On the 17th of January the produce exchange statement of the amount of breadstuffs on hand on 1st was made public and an apparent light stock of wheat and accumulating tonnages caused a break in the freight market, which did not recover all the evident short supply of tonnage on the way caused an upward movement. It was also discovered that a setting error had been made in the exhibit, figures for wheat and that there was not enough for all needs

During the latter months of the year business was engaged in long without any features of unusual interest except the discovery that an unusual amount of wheat had been shipped during the season and very heavy reclamations were disputed in England Action to prevent the recurrence of this character was taken so recently that it is still fresh in the minds of our readers A number of fine passages were made during the season two vessels reaching Cork in 98 days and an unusual number made the voyage in days and less. Two of the fleet are missing, and during the winter months a large number met with severe weather, and arrived at their destination considerably damaged.

Although exports do not reach the large total of the previous two seasons of 18 6 7 7 the money value is greater owing to the uniformly good prices paid during the season The grain fleet exclusive of steamers, which carried large amounts of flour and grain comprised 288 vessels with a total tonnage of 356 337 tons and was classed as follows American 105 British 142 German 8, Danish 10 Norwegian 4 Swedish 1 under control of American flag 3. While the number of British vessels exceeded American owing to a difference in size, American tonnage was greater by something over 4000 tons the exact figures being, British, 179,575 tons, and American 174 725 tons.

WEEKLY MARKET REPORT.

Full Review of the Merchandise and Produce Markets.

The News also has the following about the local markets Wheat remains without change though the past few days have witnessed some improvement in the local demand. New wheat is in moderate demand for July and August delivery at $1 50@1 52½ per cental. There is better inquiry for corn which is now firm at $1 15@1 15½ per ctl, for yellow, and $1 45@1 50 for white.

Bags are steady with good inquiry

Chemicals are weaker Nut oil firm

Rice steady with a wider range of prices.

The number of vessels belonging to or bound to or from U S ports, reported totally lost and missing during May was 30 comprising three steamers one ship 13 barks 8 brigs and 6 schooners and their total value exclusive of cargoes is estimated at $465 000 Among the list of missing barks is the bark Les Mona, hence for Havre, and the County of Denbigh from Astoria for Cork, also schooner Undine, lost among South Pacific islands.
